The Daily Press.

HONGKONG, DECEMBER 25th, 1901.

The question of the annexation of the Native States in the Malay Peninsula to the Straits Settlements was referred to by Mr. W. E. Maxwell, C.M.G., the British Resident in Selangor, in an address recently delivered at the Royal Colonial Institute.

Mr. Maxwell is of opinion that mischief might be done by the notion to gain ground that any political change of the kind is contemplated or desired by those who know much of the peninsula, and of our position there. The interference of England in the Government of these States, he says, is the result of the request of the Malays themselves, and it will be time to discuss the administration of the peninsula as part of the British Empire when the natives have themselves demanded the position and rights of British subjects. He admits, however, that confederation may be a feasible scheme some day, and that it would probably be to the distinct advantage of the smaller States, the development of which is retarded by an insufficient revenue, to seek political incorporation with a larger neighbour. One of the reasons urged in favour of annexation is the defectiveness of the administration of justice in the native states. On this point Mr. Maxwell says: "Again, I venture to think that, when we improve the Native States Courts, it is not to the judicial institutions of the Straits Settlements that we should turn for a model. The expense, both to Government and to 'suits,' of a system under which all the 'original civil jurisdiction, where the matter is in dispute exceeds £5, is in the hands of the Supreme Court is enormous.' From this it would seem that some reform is needed in the Straits Settlements themselves, which might well follow the example of Hongkong, where cases in which the matter in dispute does not exceed £1,000 are tried in the Summary Jurisdiction Court at a very small cost to the suitors. Nothing could better meet the requirements of an Asiatic community. If the Native States cannot look to the judicial institutions of the Straits Settlements for a model they certainly ought to be able to do so, and the sooner their institutions are so far reformed that they may safely serve as a model the better, we should say. It will be observed, however, that it is only on the score of expense that Mr. Maxwell objects to them, and that is a matter which it ought not to be difficult to amend. The real point is that the native courts, however well they may serve for the natives of the country, are not regarded as offering sufficient guarantees for the liberty and the property of British subjects and foreigners who might otherwise be inclined to take up their residence and introduce capital in the States. That it is desirable the administration of justice should be conducted on a uniform and scientific system in all the States, so far as the foreign settlers are concerned, does not admit of dispute, but this might be brought about without resorting to the expedient of out and out annexation, against which there are many valid reasons. It is not often that the French are able to teach us a lesson in Colonial matters, but possibly some useful hints might be obtained from an examination of the system in force in Tonkin. Tonkin is governed as a protected state, but side by side with the native courts we find the French courts exercising jurisdiction in all matters in which foreigners are concerned. A similar system might with advantage be introduced in the Native States of the Malay peninsula, the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements having its jurisdiction enlarged for the purpose. Even when the law to be administered in Native States it is clearly desirable, from the point of view of the foreigners residing in the country, that the interpretation of the law should be in the hands of a duly constituted court presided over by a trained judge. At present the Resident is supreme, in judicial as well as in executive matters. The Straits Times sarcastically remarks that "A plan for, a mine owner, or a railway contractor who fears that his whole worldly substance may be swept away by the decision of some young gentleman fresh from 'England, or by some superior stepped in 'twenty years of Asiatic life, cannot fail to be convinced by Mr. Maxwell's statement that litigation above £48 in the neighbourhood of Malacca is not a good thing, 'barring colony is taken before the Supreme Court'—which is not merely a good Court, but 'sometimes a dear one.' While the administration of justice continues defective capital cannot be expected to flow into the country so rapidly as it otherwise would, and that some reform of the present system is necessary appears self-evident. To extend the jurisdiction of the Straits Supreme Court so as to make it cover the Native States would only be to give Englishmen resident in those States the same rights that they enjoy in China, Japan, or Siam, where extra-territoriality prevails.

The French garrison at Saigon arrived here yesterday from Saigon. The first performance of the Christmas pantomime takes place to-morrow evening. The M. M. of the French Consulate, with the French mail of 27th November, left Singapore yesterday afternoon for Saigon. This packet brings copies of letters despatched from Hongkong on the 21st October. An accident occurred the other day in the compound of the Roman Catholic Cathedral which might have been serious. A little boy, son of Mr. A. M. Rosa Pereira, was walking on a platform on the northern side of the edifice when he fell over a low wall, and a sharp blow was struck on his head. This side of the structure is built above a high wall, and the platform is very narrow. The Cathedral authorities would do well to erect a fence to prevent such accidents, or at least to place a net to catch any one who might fall. A fatal accident will, in fact, occur there.

Mr. Takahira, Japanese Consul-General in New York, who was specially commissioned by the Mikado to look into the Exhibition matters, has made a formal application to the Director-General of the Exhibition to be allowed to visit the Exhibition buildings and on the Midway Exhibitions as follows: For an official Japanese building, 30,000 square feet; in the Manufactures Building, 30,000 square feet; in the Agriculture Building, 30,000 square feet; in the Fine Arts, 30,000 square feet; in the Machinery, 30,000 square feet; in the Electricity, 30,000 square feet; in the Transportation, 30,000 square feet; in the Miscellaneous, 30,000 square feet. Mr. Takahira was formerly secretary of the Japanese Legation in Washington and speaks English fluently. He says the Japanese are greatly interested in the Exhibition and will make a very large appropriation for participation.

The Duke of Devonshire was a member of the House of Commons from 1852 to 1868, and was created a Duke in 1891. He was a member of the Privy Council, and was a distinguished statesman and diplomatist.

On the motion of the Government, the House of Commons resolved that the Duke of Devonshire should be buried in the parish of St. George's, Hanover Square, London. The Duke of Devonshire was a member of the House of Commons from 1852 to 1868, and was created a Duke in 1891. He was a member of the Privy Council, and was a distinguished statesman and diplomatist.
